

Every time I go out to photograph nature I really find myself going within. Photography is my way of communing with the Universe, Source or God ...whatever one may call that divine essence. I love to capture those moments when my soul is touched by the extraordinary wonder and beauty seen through my camera's inner lens - from colorful bugs, smaller than a fingernail's tip, to ever changing magnificent paintings presented every morning and night for humanity's delight.

The seeds of being a nature photographer were planted as a child on family vacations to national parks when she accompanied her father as he magically captured each vista with a Polaroid camera and years later with a 35 mm SLR camera. This love of nature and photography was nurtured with a steady diet of watching nature programs on television.

Phoenix' approach to photography and life is grounded in her philosophical belief that "we are all one, we are all interconnected." In protecting the world's nature and wildlife, the environment, Phoenix feels we are really protecting the family of humanity. "The importance of nature is more than a scientific necessity for creating air, clean water and producing food. It is a sacred necessity for healing and bringing peace to the human soul. And, this is my mission as a nature photographer, to touch hearts and heal the human soul."

“Photography is a mystical experience. I see the soul of all who grant me the privilege of photographing them.”
